Cleric: A Fight to the Death

Defiant Shiite's militia ratchets up rebellion across Iraq

NAJAF, IRAQ | Militant cleric Muqtada al-Sadr, whose Shiite militia has been battling U.S. forces across Iraq, warned Monday that he would fight "until the last drop of my blood has been spilled," in his first appearance since the violence began.

The five-day-old uprising by al-Sadr's Mahdi Army began to affect Iraq's crucial oil industry, as pumping to the southern port of Basra was halted because of militant threats to infrastructure, an official with the South Oil Company said.

In the holy city of Najaf, U.S. forces tried once more to drive militiamen out of a sprawling cemetery, and an American tank rattled up to within 400 yards of the Imam Ali Shrine, Najaf's holiest site, which fighters have reportedly been using as a base.

While U.S. and Iraqi forces were trying to quell the eruption of Shiite violence, attacks by Sunni Muslim militants persisted around Baghdad: A suicide car bombing targeting a deputy governor killed six people, and a roadside bomb hit a bus, killing four.

Al-Sadr's vow to keep fighting was a defiant challenge to interim Prime Minister Ayad Allawi, who visited Najaf on Sunday and called on the Shiite militants to stop fighting. (AP)

Judge Cites Time Writer In CIA Probe

WASHINGTON | A federal judge held a reporter for Time magazine in contempt of court Monday for refusing to testify before a grand jury investigating the leak of the identity of a covert CIA officer.

In an order issued July 20 but not made public until Monday, U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Hogan ruled that Time's Matthew Cooper and "Meet the Press" host Tim Russert were required to testify "regarding alleged conversations they had with a specified executive branch official."

NBC News issued a statement saying Russert already had been interviewed under oath by prosecutors under an agreement to avoid a protracted court fight. The interview concerned a July 2003 phone conversation he had with Vice President Cheney's chief of staff, Lewis "Scooter" Libby.

Time and Cooper, however, did not agree to an interview and plan to appeal. If Time loses its appeals, Cooper could be jailed and the magazine could be fined $1,000 a day.

The probe concerns the leak last summer to syndicated columnist Robert Novak of the identity of CIA officer Valerie Plame. (AP)

Koko's Entourage

When Koko the gorilla used the American Sign Language gesture for pain and pointed to her mouth, 12 specialists, including three dentists, sprang into action. The result? Her first full medical examination in about 20 years, an extracted tooth and a clean bill of health for the Woodside, Calif., primate. A cardiologist, three anesthesiologists, three dentists, an ear and throat specialist, two veterinarians, a gastroenterologist and a gynecologist volunteered to help. "It's not often that we get to work on a celebrity," said one. "Probably, Koko is less demanding." (AP)

Sloth Could Strike Athens at Any Time

Greece's Orthodox Church turned the power of prayer toward the Athens Olympics on Sunday. They prayed for the athletes not to be lazy. "Athletes and sports fans should spend the days of the Olympic Games abhorring evil, clinging to good led by brotherly love and should not be slothful," the church said in a statement, reported Reuters. could think only of making tea on waking. One percent of women and 5 percent of men said they'd rather stay in bed and, uh, romp. The rest thought about work or went back to sleep. # FBI Eyes Terror Methods

Agency warns al Qaeda may attempt to use helicopters or limos

WASHINGTON | Al Qaeda may try to launch attacks in U.S. cities using helicopters or rented limousines packed with explosives as weapons, the FBI said in two nationwide bulletins.

Terror operatives could attempt to hijack commercial, charter or tourist helicopter flights and use them in suicide attacks against buildings, parades or sporting events, said one of the intelligence bulletins obtained Monday by The Associated Press.

Helicopters and limousines could both help terrorists get closer to targeted buildings, the FBI warnings said. The warnings were sent Friday night by the FBI and the Homeland Security Department to 18,000 state and local law enforcement agencies, other government officials and private groups.

Although the Bush administration's recent heightened terror alert was confined to financial institutions in New York, Newark, N.J., and Washington, the FBI said al Qaeda was interested in using helicopters to attack "any densely populated area of symbolic, economic or financial importance" in the United States. # Nichols Asks For Forgiveness

MCALISTER, OKLA. | Oklahoma City bombing conspirator Terry Nichols, addressing a court for the first time, pledged his allegiance to Christianity and asked victims of the blast for forgiveness Monday as a judge sentenced him to 161 consecutive life sentences.

"Words cannot adequately express the sorrow I have had over the years for the grief that so many have endured and continue to suffer," Nichols said from the witness stand.

District Judge Steven Taylor gave Nichols life without parole on each of 161 counts of first-degree murder.

Nichols had already been sentenced to life without parole in 1998 on federal charges for the deaths of eight law enforcement officers killed in the April 19, 1995 bombing. Nichols, 49, never testified during his trials and said nothing after he was convicted in federal court. (AP)

Bush Rally Touts Tax Cuts

President talks up his economic policies at Va. campaign stop

ANNANDALE, VA. | President Bush stumped for votes and touted tax cuts Monday in northern Virginia, drawing more than 600 supporters and a few dozen Democratic protesters who said his presence in the traditionally Republican state is a sign his campaign is in trouble.

Bush's rally was designed to show how his policies have enabled individual Americans to take "ownership" of the economy and to highlight entrepreneurial success.

Bush criticized Democratic presidential nominee John Kerry's plan to eliminate the tax cuts for those making more than $200,000 a year, saying that "the rich in America

SALT LAKE CITY | A first-degree murder charge was filed Monday against Mark Hacking, who allegedly confessed to relatives that he shot his wife in the head and threw her body in a trash bin.

Hacking confessed to his brothers that early on July 19 he walked into the couple's bedroom and fired a single shot in his wife's head with a .22-caliber rifle, according to a probable cause statement released Monday.

He then wrapped her body in garbage bags and placed it in a trash bin about 2 a.m. that day, the statement said. He allegedly disposed of the gun in another bin. TRAVIS REED (AP)

Chalabis Set Up Defense

Murder, counterfeiting charges part of Iraqi conspiracy, they say

BAGHDAD | Ahmad Chalabi and his nephew vigorously denied counterfeiting and murder charges Monday, saying Iraqi warrants for their arrest were part of a conspiracy trumped up by Saddam Hussein loyalists.

A former member of the U.S.-appointed Governing Council, Ahmad Chalabi once enjoyed strong U.S. ties. But he had a falling out with the Americans and was left out of Iraq's interim government. His nephew, Salem Chalabi, heads the special tribunal in charge of trying Saddam.

Ahmad Chalabi

The warrant against Ahmad Chalabi accused him of counterfeiting old Iraqi dinars, which were removed from circulation after Saddam's ouster last year. Ahmad Chalabi, who was in Iran, said he collected the fake currency in his role as chairman of the Governing Council's finance committee. "The charges are being made for political purposes," he said.

The warrant against Salem Chalabi named him as a suspect in the June murder of Haithem Fadhil, director general of the Finance Ministry. He said he'd never met Fadhil, whom he is accused of threatening over a real estate dispute.

Tough Goal For Iraq's Olympians

Officials hold out hope that news of team can bring about cease-fire

ATHENS, GREECE | The leaders of Iraq's restored Olympic committee held out hopes Monday that the games could achieve what has so far proved elusive in their homeland: a pause in the bombings and street battles.

"It is possible," said Tiras Odisho, director general of Iraq's National Olympic Committee. "Iraqis are very sports-minded. When there is an important [soccer] match ... you don't see any fighting in Baghdad."

The committee's president, Ahmed al-Sammarai, also gave a cautious prediction that the 25-member Iraqi team, the largest fielded since 1988, could unify the battered country into a state of "almost cease-fire."

Iraqi athletes will compete in soccer, weightlifting, judo, boxing, taekwondo, swimming, boxing and track and field. The team's only woman, sprinter Al'aa Hikmat, is set for the 100 and 200 meters.

"We want to prove to the whole world that there is a normal life in Iraq," said boxer Najah Salah Ali, who competes in the 106-pound class. BRIAN MURPHY (AP)

Budget Spat Foils Israeli PM's Bid To Build Coalition

JERUSALEM | Ariel Sharon, the hawk, and Shimon Peres, the dove, agree on Israel's need to pull out of Gaza, but an alliance between their two parties was held up Monday by a sharp disagreement over whether Israel should be a welfare state.

Coalition talks broke up over the 2005 state budget and welfare cuts. No further talks were scheduled, hinting at a crisis.

Sharon lost his parliamentary majority in June, alienating his right-wing constituency with his plan to pull all Israeli settlers out of Gaza and evacuate four in the West Bank. He was forced to turn for support to Labor Party leader Peres, who favors giving up most of the territories in exchange for peace. MARK LAVIE (AP)

Accident at Japan Nuclear Plant Kills 4

MIHAMA, JAPAN | Japan suffered its deadliest nuclear power plant accident Monday when a bursting pipe killed at least four workers and injured seven in another blow to the industry in a country already worried about nuclear plant safety.

No radiation was released when the boiling water and steam exploded from a cooling pipe at the plant in Mihama, a small city about 200 miles west of Tokyo. Government officials said there was no need to evacuate the area.

The steam leak followed a string of safety lapses and cover-ups at reactors, and Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi vowed to launch a thorough investigation. Fears about the safety of the country's 52 nuclear power plants soared in 1999, when a radiation leak northeast of Tokyo killed two workers and exposed hundreds to radiation. MARI YAMAGUCHI (AP)

Sudan Consents To Talks on Crisis

But official denies 30,000 have died in Darfur

CAIRO, EGYPT | Sudan agreed Monday to take part in peace talks to resolve the crisis in its western region of Darfur, where purported state-backed Arab militias are accused of killing thousands of African villagers.

Sudan's acceptance came a day after Nigerian President Olusegun Obasanjo, in his capacity as African Union chairman, offered to host the talks on what has been called the world's worst humanitarian crisis. Obasanjo invited the Sudanese government and rebel negotiators to meet in Nigeria starting Aug. 23, an African Union spokesman said.

"We welcome and will participate in the talks," Sudanese Foreign Minister Mustafa Osman Ismail said in Cairo on Monday.

Repeated attempts to get comment from the rebels on Obasanjo's invitation were unsuccessful.

The 18-month conflict began when black Africans in Darfur rose up against the government, claiming discrimination in the distribution of the region's scarce resources. Since then, Arab militias have gone on a rampage, destroying villages. As many as 30,000 people have been killed, and 1 million people have been forced to flee their homes, according to the United Nations.

Ismail, the Sudanese foreign minister, said Monday that the death toll was exaggerated. "The maximum of our estimation for those who died until now doesn't exceed 5,000," Ismail said.

TiVo's Big Push For Subscribers

Company launches
ad blitz, rebates in bid to fend off DVR rivals

SAN JOSE, CALIF. | TiVo Inc. unleashed a marketing campaign and price rebates Monday, marking the digital video recorder pioneer's most aggressive — and most critical — push yet to win subscribers and become profitable.

The company, whose technology records TV programs without the hassles of videotape and lets users pause live TV and do instant replays, is offering $100 rebates for its own branded DVRs as well as several other devices that use TiVo's technology. The promotion drives the price down to as low as $99 for a 40-hour TiVo Series2 model. Meanwhile, print ads are planned in dozens of newspapers and magazines.

The moves are all part of an ambitious growth initiative that TiVo announced in March, when it set aside $50 million in marketing expenses to help it more than double its subscribers to 3 million.

TiVo is facing increasing competition from cable and satellite providers that are introducing DVR features, usually with service charges lower than TiVo's $12.95 a month.

As Forrester Research analyst Josh Bernoff put it: "This is it. This is their shot to get a whole lot of new subscribers before cable DVR subscribers really take off." (AP)

Google to Give Yahoo $300M in Stock

SAN FRANCISCO | Online search engine leader Google will surrender more than $300 million of its stock to Yahoo Inc. in a settlement that removes a legal threat hanging over its IPO.

The deal announced Monday gives Yahoo an additional 2.7 million shares of Google stock in exchange for dropping a patent lawsuit involving a crucial piece of online advertising technology. The payment also resolves a dispute over how much Yahoo is owed under an old partnership between the two companies.

Google warned it will absorb a charge of up to $290 million. The company still expects to complete the IPO later this month, according to documents filed Monday. (AP)

Growing Use for Cards

Metro leads effort to have SmarTrip work on other transit systems

WASHINGTON | Metro's SmarTrip technology reached a milestone Monday, with fareboxes that accept the cards installed on all the transit agency's 1,400 buses.

Now Metro and other transportation officials are focusing on expanding the use of the plastic, rechargeable cards to 15 rail and bus systems in the region.

Buses in Baltimore will begin using the smart card technology this fall, Maryland Transit officials said. Over the next two years those cards will be extended to the city's light rail and MARC trains. Buses in some Maryland counties and northern Virginia will begin using the technology next year.

The Virginia Railway Express, also plans to use the cards in another year or two, a spokesman said.

All of the cards will be interchangeable on any of the region's transit systems. CANDACE SMITH (AP)

After city officials spent days examining petitions for forgeries in an initiative to bring video lottery terminals to Washington, a D.C. Council member wants to do more than bet it won't happen again. Council member Adrian Fenty, D-Ward 4, plans to introduce legislation when the council returns next month that would ban the machines. He said the council should consider tightening laws to "pre-empt something like this from happening." (AP)

Md. Dorm Quarantined Following Mass Illness

LARGO, MD. | A residence hall has been quarantined at the University of Maryland after more than 100 students who stayed there during a leadership conference became sick over the weekend.

University spokesman George Cathcart says officials at the College Park campus plan to disinfect all nonporous surfaces Tuesday at LaPlata Hall.

Cathcart said students won't be allowed to stay in the building until it has been thoroughly cleaned.

Meanwhile, Prince George's County health officials are still trying to determine what caused the teens to get sick. There are indications that food poisoning might be to blame, but no cause has been determined.

The first student began complaining of nausea and other gastrointestinal symptoms on Saturday.

By Sunday evening, about 70 students had been treated at two private hospitals located not far from the College Park campus. Although most were released, several remained hospitalized Monday, health officials said. All were expected to recover.

The students had been attending the National Youth Leadership Conference program. (AP)

Coughlin Makes His Son-in-Law A Starter in N.Y.

FOOTBALL | Giving second-round draft pick Chris Snee a starting job on the New York Giants' offensive line has been a move expected from new coach Tom Coughlin.

Having starters Tiki Barber and Amani Toomer as potential punt returners for the preseason opener against Kansas City was a switch almost no one anticipated.

Coughlin made both moves on Monday, shifting David Diehl to right tackle and giving Snee, his son-in-law, the open spot at right guard.

The change makes Snee a starter before Eli Manning, the first pick in last April's draft, who is trying to beat out veteran Kurt Warner at quarterback. (AP)

Orioles' Streak Reaches 7

Baltimore completes 4-game sweep of Texas

BASEBALL | After completing their most successful homestand in 35 years, the Baltimore Orioles headed west trying to extend their longest winning streak in five seasons.

"We're going to ride the wave," manager Lee Mazzilli said Monday after Baltimore won its seventh straight, beating the Texas Rangers 7-3 to complete a four-game sweep.

After stumbling through the first four months of the season, the Orioles open a three-game series in Anaheim on Tuesday with designs of making some noise in the AL wild-card race.

Melvin Mora homered twice and drove in three runs, and Larry Bigbie also connected for the Orioles, who enjoyed their first 7-0 homestand since September 1969. Baltimore, which began the run with three wins over Seattle, is within four games of .500 (53-57) for the first time since June 13.

Before the homestand, the Orioles had the worst home record in the American League. Now they're 29-29 at Camden Yards after outscoring the Mariners and Rangers by a combined 50-24. DAVID GINSBURG (AP)

Loaiza Hears Boo Birds

BASEBALL | Just two starts into his career with the New York Yankees, Esteban Loaiza's spot in the rotation is in jeopardy.

Gabe Gross connected off Loaiza for his first major league home run, Josh Towers took a shutout into the seventh inning and the Toronto Blue Jays won in John Gibbons' first game as manager, beating New York 5-4 Monday to stop a five-game losing streak.

"Everybody says the pressure, the pressure," said Loaiza, acquired from the Chicago White Sox for Jose Contreras on July 31. "Wearing the Yankee uniform and the pinstripes I think is a little bit more heavy than just when you get traded from Pittsburgh to another team."

Loaiza (9-6) allowed his 26th homer of the season, third in the AL behind Jamie Moyer (31) and Bartolo Colon (29). As soon as Gross' two-run drive down the right-field line hit the top of the wall and bounced over, the crowd of 49,853 began booing Loaiza. RONALD BLUM (AP)

The Redskins

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

Washington Post staff writer MARK SCHLABACH was online Monday discussing the Redskins' training camp.

How do you feel the Redskins are going to do this year? Can't they be considered legitimate darkhorse Super Bowl contenders considering they've emerged from the worst coached team to among the best in one season?

Super Bowl is a stretch. Making the playoffs would be a good start.

When it becomes apparent that the new Joe Gibbs is not the old Gibbs, how long will Mr. Snyder give him before making a change?

Two years. If Gibbs can't win here, I guess nobody can then.

Champ Bailey says football folks that know football aren't running the Redskins. Who's he referring to?

I think he was referring to Daniel Snyder. I know Snyder was intimately involved in Champ's contract negotiations before he left, and the talks got pretty heated.

After watching this year's Hall of Fame inductions, it got me wondering about Art Monk's chances of getting into the Hall. A number of receivers with way less credentials have already been admitted, yet all we ever hear about is that Monk didn't talk to the press all that much. Are they going to hold that against him now?

Media can hold grudges, but in my mind, there's little doubt that Monk is a Hall of Fame player.

Andre Lott vs. Sean Taylor?

Eventually, it will be Taylor. He's a major talent and is making an awful lot of money.

Do players ever object to being called a "weak-side" player?

No. LaVar Arrington sure seems a lot happier being on the weak side than the strong side. Less traffic, for one thing.

TROY, PART II: Details of Friday's opening ceremony of the Athens Games are emerging following a dress rehearsal Sunday night. Among the attractions are: a Trojan horse, a giant statue of the goddess Athena and mythological figures sailing through a lake on the Olympic stadium infield. (AP)

The Gods Must Be Crazy

Mascots Phevos and Athena are a laughing stock

MASCOTS | They're getting more bad press than the Olsen twins and worse reviews than the latest Spike Lee flick. Olympic mascots Phevos and Athena, siblings named for a pair of Greek deities, are catching an ungodly amount of abuse around Athens.

The pair were derided in various news articles, described as animated condoms and mutants from a nuclear meltdown. Their names were co-opted by anti-Olympic activists, who promptly firebombed two government vehicles in February.

Oh, my gods, where did things go wrong?

Nearly 200 entries were submitted when Athens organizers put out the call for prospective mascots. The winning creatures were created by a team of six, including a philologist/historian. They were billed as two kids, brother and sister, "full of vitality and creativity, perhaps mischievous and hence lovable."

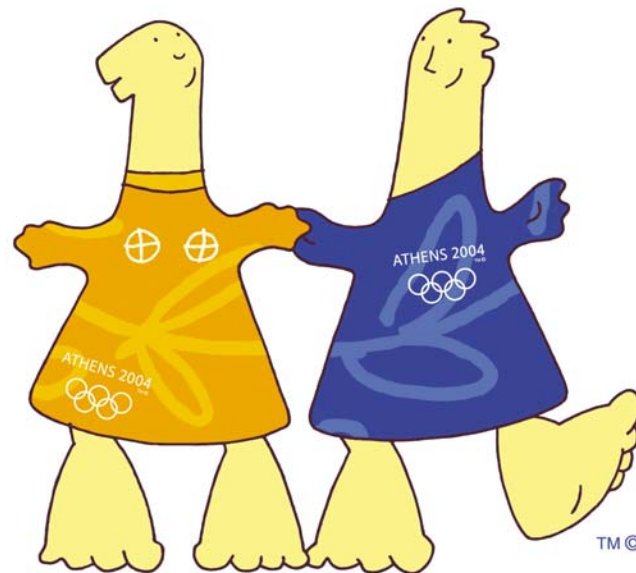

Their bloodlines were impeccable, too. Phevos was named for Apollo, the Greek god of light and music. Athena was the goddess of wisdom.

But in the pantheon of Olympic mascots, the Greek duo remains head and shoulders — if they actually had shoulders — above the most-reviled Olympic mascot ever, Izzy of the 1996 Summer Games in Atlanta.

Izzy was short for Whatizit, and there were plenty of answers for that. Announcer Bob Costas maligned the mascot as "a genetic experiment gone horribly, ghastly wrong." LARRY MCSHANE (AP)

Tragic End To Greek Squabble

Boyfriend jumps from same spot on balcony as Greek judo champ

NEA IONIA, GREECE | As relatives tell it, it was the stuff of Greek tragedy: A love-struck young man threw himself off his balcony Monday, two days after a quarrel prompted his girlfriend — a member of Greece's Olympic judo team — to jump from the same spot.

Giorgos Chrisostomides, 24, was on life-support at an Athens hospital with injuries to his head and back. His high-school sweetheart, 20-year-old judo champion Eleni Ioannou, was at another hospital in critical condition with multiple fractures to her head and body.

Friends and relatives said the couple's argument on Saturday was minor, and they were shocked at its tragic consequences. "It was a small fight, something silly," said Chrisostomides' cousin and downstairs neighbor, Paul Michaelides. "It started about who would play solitaire on the computer."

The fight escalated, and Ioannou eventually hurled herself from the balcony, they said. Chrisostomides was inconsolable. NIKO PRICE (AP)

Olympic Champ Gardner Pins His Hopes on Gold

WRESTLING | Russian wrestler Alexander Karelin, one of the greatest Olympians ever, retired shortly after losing the gold in Sydney to unheralded American Rulon Gardner.

Karelin's departure precluded any Athens rematch — which is just fine with Gardner.

"I'm not disappointed at all that he's not here," Gardner said Monday. "I have one goal ahead of me this year — to win a gold medal."

Gardner has battled a variety of physical ailments since Sydney.

He lost a toe — and nearly his life — after a February 2002 snowmobiling accident in Wyoming. He survived a motorcycle crash earlier this year, only to severely dislocate his right wrist in a basketball game.

"My overall health is really well," Gardner said. (AP)

U.S.-Born Greeks Fail Test for Drugs

DOPING | Two players on the Greek Olympic baseball team tested positive for banned substances.

Andrew James Brack and Derek Nicholson, both U.S.-born Greek citizens, tested positive in samples taken Aug. 5, the Greek Olympic Committee said Monday.

Brack tested positive for the steroid stanozolol, while Nicholson, an alternate on the team, tested positive for diuretics, officials said.

Nicholson was a center fielder last season for the Toledo Mud Hens, the Detroit Tigers' Triple-A team.

Brack used to play in the independent Northeast League. (AP)

Escape A Date

CELL PHONES | The peak time for dates from hell in New York City is Friday at 8 p.m. — judging by the cell phone calls delivering emergency excuses to bolt.

Truth is, they're fake "rescue" calls — now being offered by both Cingular Wireless and Virgin Mobile USA.

Dan Enthoven, director of marketing for BeVocal, the California company behind rescue calling, said the number of calls go up on weekends, especially Fridays at about 8 p.m. Cingular and Virgin Mobile generate at least 10,000 rescue calls a month, he said.

With both services, a customer arranges to be called at a set time, using the cell phone's keypad.

When the cell rings, one of Cingular's eight "emergency" messages says: "Hey, this is your Escape-A-Date call. If you're looking for an excuse, I got it. Just repeat after me, and you'll be on your way! 'Not again! Why does that always happen to you? ... All right, I'll be right there.' Now tell 'em that your roommate got locked out, and you have to go let them in. Good luck!"

And bingo, the bad date is history.

The rescue-call service is part of a Cingular package that costs $4.99 a month. Virgin Mobile offers its Rescue Ring at 25 cents per use, plus the price of the call. (AP)

I use Verizon through work (so I can't switch) and have not been about to purchase a Bluetooth-enabled phone through them. Any idea when they will have a phone with Bluetooth?

Verizon will (finally) offer a Bluetooth phone next month, when the Motorola V710 goes on sale.

Do you put much stock in the very negative consumer reviews of the Palm Tungsten E on Amazon.com? I try not to heed these, as people generally like to complain, but there are 176 reviews and many, if not most, are negative.

I liked the Tungsten E just fine when I reviewed it last year, enough that I put my own money down on one last month. No complaints here. The batteries do drain a bit fast if you leave the screen at maximum brightness, and the screen could be easier to read in daylight, but overall I'm quite pleased with the purchase.

Cover It Up

WOUNDS | It used to be so simple. You were a kid. You fell down and skinned your knee. You cried.

But today if mom needs to reach for a bandage, her choices go far beyond just size or shape.

Improved treatments for chronic nonhealing wounds, those that persist longer than 30 days, has spun off products now available to the public. Shelves are now jam-packed with specialized products.

Liquid bandages are among the newest. While they may be more expensive per application, they last longer.

Johnson's Advanced Care and Curad's Hydro-Heal brands. They have particles that absorb fluids from the wound and form a gel that provides a moist environment, reducing scarring.

Bandages containing ionized silver, tiny bits that leach out over time, offer a natural anti-bacterial effect.

Anti-blister bandages use hydrocolloid technology to generate a gel cushion that stays in place for several days, seals out water and germs, and is flexible.

Anti-itch bandages contain a topical ointment. Anti-bleeding bandages use fibers or gels to stop bleeding quickly. They may be of use to people who take anti-coagulant drugs.

If a wound doesn't heal after 30 days, it's time to see a doctor. CAROLE GOLDBERG (HARTFORD COURANT)

Do you have any tips on how to get started? I need to lose 50 lbs, but it all feels so daunting. Help!

Well, you have the most important equipment: desire. The next step is taking steps — lots of them in a row. Go walking. This will be a lot easier with a buddy, preferably someone with fitness goals so they don't cancel on you. Also, consider buying a pedometer. Many walking advocates say they are addictive and really increase your amount of walking; you should be able to find one for $20 to $30. Be patient with yourself. You won't lose 50 lbs in two months, but you'll build your cardio endurance, some leg strength and enjoy the outdoors. And one day you might just break into a jog.

Can you recommend a fitness routine that can be done at home? What equipment do you need?

Depending on what type of exercise you like, you could start a plan with almost no equipment. Yoga and the scaled-down version of Pilates require only a mat. If you're in average or poor shape, a set of hand weights could suffice. You'll want to run through at least two sets of eight to 12 reps (of a weight that is fairly hard to lift) for chest, biceps, triceps, upper and lower back. You can use an exercise band for leg and upper-body work. Look for books or Web sites that detail these exercises. For cardio — which you need — consider a videotape if you really can't leave the house.

Flight fitness: Airlines are promoting in-air yoga and pilates. Does it work — and will anyone do it? In the Washington Post, Health section.

A Hit in Two Worlds

Miami's JD Natasha brings grit and attitude to her bilingual rock

NEW FACES | She started singing in her crib, banging a tambourine with the church choir at age 5 and writing songs at 11.

Now 16, singer-songwriter JD Natasha has a raw rocker sound, rangy voice and angst-filled lyrics — and her first album, “Imperfecta/Imperfect.”

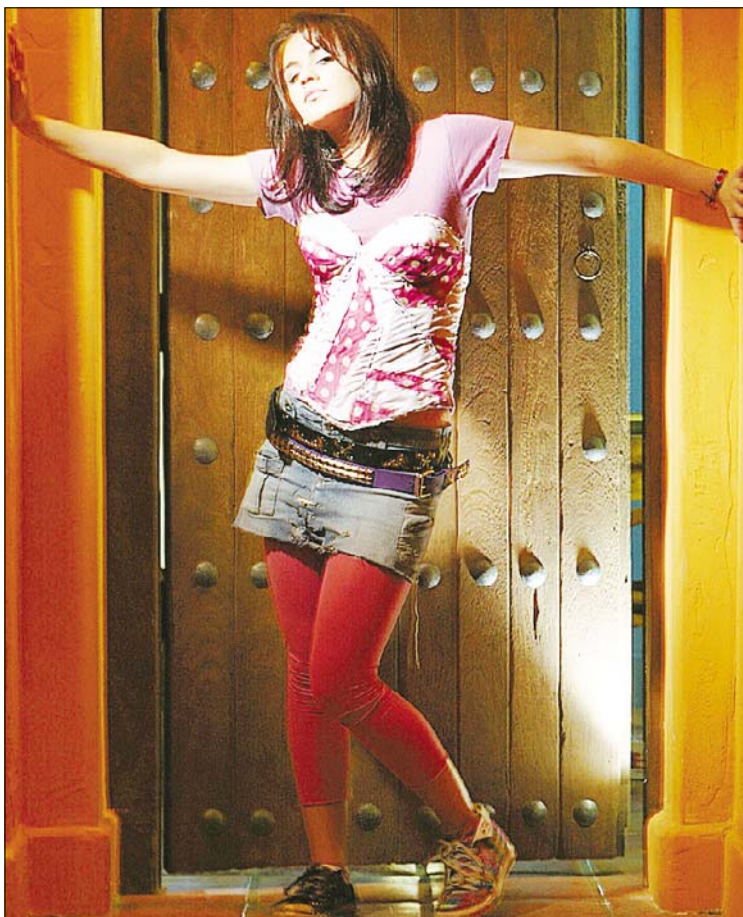

Released in July, JD Natasha's album includes 11 songs in Spanish and three in English. Her bilingualism is allowing her to bust into two markets at the same time.

EMI Latin President Jorge Pino signed her up after one listen. A neighbor of his knocked on his door at 10:30 p.m. and told him, code-like, “The hairdresser's daughter is a good singer.”

Pino's house was being remodeled, so he put a demo in the workers' dusty boombox and listened. He signed her the next day, and the bandwagon has since filled up.

Don't expect cookie-cutter, bubble-gum pop from dark-haired Natasha, who sings that “I'm not a plastic Barbie/I have a soul.”

“I was always leaning toward the rock side,” Natasha said. “I don't see myself doing Britney Spears stuff ... I've always written about life.”

THE HAIRDRESSER'S DAUGHTER: Natasha wants to fill a void in teen music.

She claims alternative gods Nirvana and the Cure, David Bowie, Radiohead and Bob Marley as influences, and she projects a Chrissie Hynde-Joan Jett look with a youthful, rebellious edge.

Her powerful voice belies her tiny stature, as does her presence in two videos, the English-language “Imperfect” and the Spanish “Lagrimas” (“Tears”). The album also features a stirring acoustic remake of OutKast's hit “Hey Ya.”

“Always feeling high/Losing sense of time/Drunk off my imperfections/I'll never be all right,” she sings in “Imperfect.”

Critics are lauding lyrics that seem too mature for the 16-year-old, who plays piano and guitar and started writing songs in English, but learned to pen them in Spanish.

“Kids go through a lot of things by the age of 13,” she said. “A lot of them are very mature. I'm just the one to bring it out. I'm the voice for them. There's no one.”

Radical Rock

Politically outspoken bands are getting major-label attention

INDUSTRY | For ten years, the Pittsburgh punk-rock band Anti-Flag has toiled on the fringes of the musical mainstream. Independent record labels have carried the group's politically charged message to fans. The group has toured incessantly, traveling in a cramped van to less-than-cushy clubs.

All the while, Anti-Flag has encouraged its teenage fans to become involved in left-wing politics through songs like “Their System Doesn't Work for You.”

The quartet's radical oeuvre and modest sales would seem to place it squarely at odds with the major record labels. But Anti-Flag has become the subject of a furious bidding war, with offers in excess of $500,000 for a single album, said its lawyer, Anita Rivas.

Battles for bands like Anti-Flag demonstrate the burgeoning commercial potential for music that was, until recently, deemed too partisan or controversial.

Record companies have not necessarily feared backlash. “The biggest problem with political music has not been that it's controversial,

MAKE SOME NOISE: A riven political climate helps motivate bands like Anti-Flag.

but that it's boring,” said Danny Goldberg, a music executive well known for his liberal views, who is now president of the independent label Artemis Records. “The risk is that maybe it won't sell.”

Tom Sarig, who manages Against

Me, a Florida quartet, said that the reaction among young fans to their politically potent messages is “almost religious.” “The majors are transfixed by that,” Mr. Sarig said. “They have to get in on it.”

A Novel Takes Careful Aim

'Checkpoint' is an unsettling dialogue about killing the president

BOOKS | Give Nicholson Baker this much: He knows how to grab on to the national consciousness and squeeze.

"Vox" (1992), a 176-page, hot-pink transcript of an erotic telephone conversation, dragged the notion of phone sex into the mainstream and figured in the Clinton-Lewinsky mess. "The Fermata" (1994) made explicit lewdness into just another plot device.

Now, just when you thought the brouhaha over Michael Moore's movie was over and we could all settle down to an August of watching "The Manchurian Candidate" and listening to the presidential candidates trade insults, the literary community has produced its own campaign-season flash-point: Baker's taut, fictional meditation on one man's desire to kill President George W. Bush.

The deeply unsettling "Checkpoint" (Knopf) takes the form of a spare, almost Socratic dialogue between two friends, Ben and Jay. Their tension: Jay is determined to do away with the president. An appalled Ben doesn't want him to.

Ben is summoned to a hotel room to see his friend and is let in on the scheme. What follows is an astonishing, often uncomfortable conversation about a topic that — particularly in these jumbled days — is pretty risky even to be discussing. The very reference in the text to "a Bush-seeking bullet" is enough to make a reader look over his shoulder to see who's watching.

"Sometimes you reach a point where you realize that millions of tiny individual decisions are condensed into one man," Jay tells Ben. "That's what I'm up against."

As usual, Baker's prose is dead-on. Like a hyper-urban David Mamet, he has demonstrated a distinctive talent for capturing the cadence and wry wit of the modern intelligentsia in conversation.

Whether he shares the anti-Bush outrage or not (it seems pretty clear that he does), Baker manages to channel it into his extended dialogue in a manner that fumes without boiling over into something overwrought.

Jay's musings straddle moral outrage and mental instability, never veering too far into either. As a character represented only by his utterances, he is a spokesman for what could happen. Ben — sometimes bewildered, sometimes intrigued — is our representative in the piece. He reacts as we would: "You're scaring me, man. Let me see your pupils."

Repugnant though it often feels, "Checkpoint" is a ripped-from-the-headlines docudrama for the printed page, a timely and tense screed for a divided country hurtling toward who-knows-where.

Fay Wray fought against — and then accepted — the "King Kong" legacy.

Film Beauty Fay Wray Dies

APPRECIATION | Fay Wray, who won everlasting fame as the damsel held atop the Empire State Building by the giant ape in the 1933 film classic "King Kong," has died, a close friend said Monday. She was 96.

Wray died Sunday at her Manhattan apartment, said Rick McKay. There was no official cause of death.

During a career that started in 1923, Wray appeared with such stars as Ronald Colman, Gary Cooper and Spencer Tracy, but she was destined to be linked with Kong in movie fans' minds.

"I used to resent 'King Kong,'" she remarked in a 1963 interview. "But now I don't fight it anymore. I realize that it is a classic, and I am pleased to be associated with it."

After appearing in Erich von Stroheim's 1928 silent "The Wedding March," playing a poor Viennese girl abandoned by her lover, a playboy prince, Wray became a much-employed leading lady. In 1933, she appeared in 11 films with a variety of male co-stars.

In 1980, she spoke of roles of that period: "In those days ... leading ladies were not supposed to be funny but were supposed to stand there and look beautiful. That was frustrating as an actress."

MS. JACKSON IF YOU'RE WACKY: Twisted sister La Toya Jackson is on the charts with two Top 20 hits — "If You Feel the Funk" and "Just Wanna Dance" — and a name change, according to Billboard. Ms. Jackson is now known as "Toy." "I altered my name," she explained, "to see what would happen."

Entertainment

It Looks Funny

INNOVATION | The DVD era is resurrecting the great colorization debate of the 1980s, and at the heart of the matter are Curly, Larry and Moe.

Sony's Columbia TriStar home-video unit is releasing two Three Stooges DVDs that allow viewers to watch the original black-and-white or digitally colorized versions.

Purists consider it desecration, while Sony executives say the process can help introduce Hollywood classics to young audiences reluctant to watch black and white.

The Stooges discs coming out today also give die-hard fans better black-and-white versions, the studio insisted.

The new Stooges DVDs, "Goofs on the Loose" and "Stooged and Confoosed," contain four shorts each featuring Moe and Curly Howard and Larry Fine.

Offering a choice does not appease critics like "Spider-Man" director Sam Raimi. "I don't think they should mess with black and white," said Raimi.

"I think they should just leave it as they are and try to preserve them as best they can. I feel like it's an artistic interpretation that's not anybody's right to make except the director's."

Vice president of marketing for Columbia TriStar home entertainment Suzanne White said colorization is just another tool to make old movies more palatable to modern audiences, like converting analog sound to 5.1 digital audio.

ON TV TONIGHT

THE DRAG DECADE
As years go, 1979 may be remembered as one long bummer. If double-digit inflation wasn't bad enough, there were gas shortages. Things became so dismal that President Jimmy Carter retreated to a mountaintop. When he came down, he addressed the nation with an address so dispiriting it became known as "The Malaise Speech."

But people can get nostalgic for anything, even malaise. CLASS OF 1979: BIO '79 (8 p.m., Biography Channel) recalls and celebrates Bo Derek's corn-rowed hairdo from "10," The Village People, "Dallas"-mania, and, of course, Three Mile Island, the Chrysler bail-out and the Iranian hostage crisis. Those were the days!

THE OLYMPICS: BETTER LIVING THROUGH CHEMICALS
DOPING TO WIN (8 p.m., Discovery Times) profiles Dr. Don Catlin and other experts who have exposed the current doping scandal to involve the U.S. track and field team. With the opening ceremonies of the Athens Games just days away, this drug scandal has cast a pall over the Olympics, and American athletes in particular. Catlin also discusses current investigations that he believes may result in one of the biggest drug arrests in sports history.

GUESS WHAT? WE PUT YOU ON TV TO MAKE FUN OF YOU!
The truth emerges on a two-hour season finale of JOE SCHMO 2 (9 p.m., Spike). If you haven't been following this season's "Schmo," catch up with an 8-hour "Joe Schmo 2" marathon (1 p.m.).

What the Jury Saw

BEHIND THE SCENES | "In the Jury Room" (10 p.m., ABC) offers a fly-on-the-wall view of a real jury deciding a capital murder case.

In tonight's installment, ABC News was given unprecedented access to the trial of Mark Ducic, an Ohio resident accused of double homicide. The makers of "Jury Room" have documented every stage of the case from pretrial hearings right through the verdict.

We will see the defendant and his lawyers and public defenders, the judge in his chambers and the jury as they deliberate. For those who can't get enough, ABC will post a complete transcript of the deliberations on the Internet immediately after the program airs.

Future installments of "In the Jury Room" will cover six homicide cases from Arizona, Colorado and Ohio. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Charcoal is so passe. Outdoor foodies want their grills glamorous

You can't beat infrared for grilling steak outdoors, said Ted Liggett. The Lubbock, Texas, attorney loves taking a rib-eye out to his poolside grill and cranking up the infrared burners to 1,200 degrees.

"You sear that puppy two to three minutes on a side," he said.

Like many Americans these days, Liggett is grilling in high style.

On the market today are outdoor grills with price tags north of $9,000 — the Hummers of the grill world.

Backyard chefs say the pricey models are needed as grilling moves beyond burger-flipping to an era of Buffalo ribs, rotisserie chicken, smoked pork and pizza. Manufacturers have responded with gas grills that are essentially kitchen appliances with weather proofing. Makers call them "outdoor entertainment centers."

Weber's annual GrillWatch survey reported this year that people are comfortable spending more on grills, up to an average of $386 compared to $234 a year ago. High-end ers and can retail for $8,000.

Prices add up if grillers accessorize. Liggett, for instance, has an outdoor sink and fireplace and refrigerator complementing the Solaire grill behind his home in Lubbock.

Enthusiasts say big grills offer another benefit: versatility. Barbecue Bob Johnston said he can cook meat, vegetables and a pot of potatoes at the same time on his grill without ever having to run into the kitchen.

"Barbecue cooking and grilling are as much a hobby to me as a boat might be to somebody else," Johnston said. MICHAEL HILL (AP) grills are the fastest growing area of the market, said Shaun Chinsky, director of marketing for Weber-Stephen Products Co.

Weber even has a high-end brand, Vieluxe, that Chinsky said is "like our Lexus." The 56-inch, stainless-steel grill has six burn-

Live Online

Metro Q&amp;A

Washington Post staff writer LYNDESE LAYTON was online Monday to answer questions about Metrorail and Metrobus | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

I'm a daily bus rider who has long pondered this question. The bus announces the names of streets as it drives by them. How does it know where it is? Is it pre-programmed? Does the bus driver push a button at each intersection, or what?

Global positioning device.

Does Metro have a long-term capital improvement plan that would allow for upgrading various facilities? I've noticed there is no real effort to repair structural damage such as the discolorations on the walls from water and leaks other than appropriately placed pails.

Metro does have a long-term capital program; it just doesn't have much long-term capital money. And often the priorities of the long-term program get shifted around, depending on what's perceived as the most pressing problem. That water issue to which you refer is a good example — about four years ago it was flagged as an urgent problem but has seemingly fallen to a back burner as other problems garnered more attention. Drip, drip, drip.

Rumor has it that Metro will be putting ATM machines into some stations. Is this true and if so, when?

Yes, that's true. As part of its new strategy to earn more money from advertising and other sources, Metro plans to rent space inside stations to banks for ATM machines. It also is considering renting kiosk space for dry cleaners, shoe cobblers and other non-food services. But the agency is just now receiving bids and hasn't announced any deals, so it's hard to say when this will happen. My guess is late this year, early '05.

What is Metrorail's policy for dealing with sick passengers on trains?

If the passenger can get off the train under his or her own steam, Metro tries to get the passenger onto a platform and resume train movement. But if the sick passenger cannot move, the train has to stay in the station until medical help arrives.

A Sin of Omission

I SEARCHED Monday's issue thoroughly and found not a single mention of the passing of Rick James. Legal woes aside, James was one of the most influential artists of our time and his presence will sorely be missed. Such a glaring omission on your part is shameful.

—DENISE MONTGOMERY

Seriously, Wit Is Welcome

I GAVE A WRY SMILE on Friday as I read another letter criticizing your tongue-in-cheek take on the news.

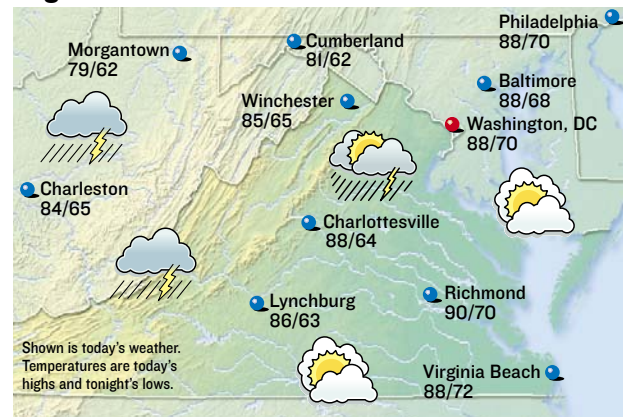

The jocular headlines and witty perspective of your writers accurately reflect the tastes, and needs, of your audience. The occasional PG-13 photos may border on tabloid-worthy, but they provide this reader a less-serious perspective from which to begin an all-too-serious workday.

Trivial Pursuit

Because there is a school government election in the recent film "Napoleon Dynamite," and because there's a presidential election in the U.S., the marketing wizards at Fox Searchlight lured fans of the film into an election for president of the "Napoleon Dynamite" fan club. Defeating more than 35,000 candidates, 18-year-old KATHERINE HUNTER of New Orleans won the post. She also won the bike used in the film and a visit from star JON HEDER. #### Another Dem Speaks Out Against Being Against Bush

JOHN MELLENCAMP has joined a coalition of musicians trying to unseat President Bush, but he doesn't have anything against Republicans. "If there was a Democrat in the White House, and this was going on, we'd still be doing this," Mellenkamp said Sunday. "It's a protest about the abuse of... American values. And in this case it just so happens that, yes, this is a Republican president, and yes, the proceeds will go to efforts to defeat that Republican president." ### MUSICALS

It's Like 'The O.C.' Without Indie Rock

"Good Vibrations," a new musical using more than 30 BEACH BOYS songs, will open on Broadway in January, it was announced Monday. The show isn't about the Beach Boys, but concerns a group of small-town teens who come to Southern California. It will be directed and choreographed by John Carrafa, who created the dance sequences for "Urinetown." Among the songs expected to be used in the show are "Good Vibrations," "California Girls," "Help Me, Rhonda," "Surf City," "Surfer Girl" and "Surfin' Safari." Preview performances will begin in early December at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre. An opening date will be announced shortly. (AP)

Yesterday's Solution

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Time is on your side, so you mustn't let a hothead rush you into making a decision that could prove erroneous in the end.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

You can enjoy the company of many kindred spirits. The result will be more than emotional support, as you may profit as well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

Your interpretation of past events will figure prominently, and you may have the chance to share this perspective with an audience.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

When a major challenge comes your way, you may not prevail. Win or lose; you'll enjoy yourself and learn a thing or two.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

Be charming and sociable, but take care to not be overly manipulative. Though you're after something, you must remain sincere.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Distractions should be avoided. Focus squarely on one or two primary objectives and you will succeed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

That which you've been waiting for has finally arrived, and you must be sure that you're fully prepared.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

Don't balk when the opportunity to move ahead arises. Take it slow and explore new boundaries.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

You're in need of guidance early in the day, and what you receive from a friend should eventually be shared with someone else in need.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

You're not in the mood to be on display, though your work may require you to present yourself in the best possible light.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

A possibly explosive situation will arise from an unexpected conflict over a minor issue. It's up to you to defuse it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

Harmony and contentment may seem elusive, but once you have one, the other will quickly follow. Both are attainable.
